REDUCTION OF JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

Sport-based youth-development programs help prevent or reduce delinquency by building personal identity and social connection.

LOWER SCHOOL DROPOUTS

Youth participation in structured sport and extracurricular programs is associated with lower dropout risk, stronger school engagement and better academic outcomes.

TEEN PREGNANCY RISK REDUCTION

National longitudinal data cited by Sabo et al. found female athletes were 33% less likely to become teen mothers than female non-athletes.

BULLYING & AGGRESSION INTERVENTION

A 2025 systematic review of 21 studies concluded that sport-based interventions can substantially reduce bullying perpetration and victimization.

YOUTH MENTAL HEALTH & WELLNESS

Youth sport participation is associated with lower depressive symptoms, social anxiety, emotional distress, hopelessness, and, in some studies, suicidality.

VITAL SOCIAL SUPPORT

Team sports help reduce social isolation by creating opportunities for belonging, friendships, peer support, and regular interaction with supportive adults.

building a healthy citizenry

President Ferdinand Marcos Jr. during his State of the Nation Address 2025, directed PSC to open its track & field facilities in Rizal, Pasig, and Baguio to the public for free to promote a healthy lifestyle.
